

DOUBLE IN BERTHA MASON – In “Jane Eyre” written by Charlotte Bronte there is an enigmatic character; in a secret room is locked Bertha Mason, Mr Rochester’s first wife, because she is insane. Bertha represents a double because she is Creole, a white woman with African origins, for this reason she has a problem with white people and with black people. Bertha is strictly connected with “Rebecca”(by Daphne du Maurier) the first wife of Mr. De Winter. They are enigmatic and mysterious women.
